Death And Dowie Stand Face To Face

SELF-STYLED APOSTLE MAY FACE THE GREAT MAKER

Controversy Now Sinks Into Comparative Insignificance

THE SECOND ELIJAH REFUSES TO HAVE A PHYSICIAN

Chicago, April 12.—The Record Herald today says:

John Alexander Dowie's controversy with Voliva and the other revolutionists at Zion City has shrunk into insignificance. Just before midnight last night the self-styled apostle faced the Great Maker of all. On his knees in the center of his chamber in the Auditorium Annex, whence he had stumbled from his bed in the midst of a racking illness, Dr. Dowie invoked Heavenly aid in what may be his final struggle with disease.

It was at the close of a strenuous day that the Zionist was attacked. His collapse seemed so extreme that his personal attendants, all of whom have been taught to shun medicine, urged that they be allowed to send for a physician.

"I want no doctor," said Dowie feebly. "I will have no physician. I shall ask Divine assistance—that is the only real help."

Then with a convulsive movement Dowie struggled from his bed and stumbled toward the center of the room. He had gone but a few feet when he sank to his knees and muttered a prayer.

His attendants carried him back to bed again and at three o'clock this morning he was said to be sleeping.

WEAK REVOLUTION.

LACK OF TRUE PATRIOTISM IN THE RUSSIAN REVOLT.

Lawlessness and Disregard of National Interests Characterize Actions of the Striking Workmen.

The special strength of the Russian revolution appears to have proved its special weakness. It was supposed that the great railroad strikes and other strikes in the manufacturing towns would afford the revolutionists a new and powerful weapon. In fact, says the Washington Star, the revolution gained immensely as regards the impression on those who watched its course because of the appearance of mystery with which it had been invested. By degrees it became evident, however, that the elements which were missing from the Russian revolution were such as could not safely be dispensed with. Radical as was the news that came in from all parts of the empire, nevertheless there appeared little or nothing in the way of real progress. It was difficult to say what the revolutionists were aiming at—whether they knew themselves what they wanted.

The people were puzzled with speculations as to whether it was a dynasty or a constitutional movement. Did its real strength lie in the towns or in the country? Was its object industrial or agrarian? Or was it simply a gathering of the forces of discontent formidable—most formidable—from the point of view of the prosperity and good administration of the empire, but not such a revolution as left the government no choice, but that between conquering and being conquered. The outcome appears after all, no matter what the liberalizing tendencies may have been, to have been favorable to the government. In spite of all the czar is still on his throne, Count Witte is still his first minister and enough of the army is faithful to him to give him command of the situation at all events in St. Petersburg and in Moscow.

Things have so far solidified themselves that Sergius Yulievitch Witte, the first minister of Russia, is even willing to comment upon the situation as it exists. In answer to questions recently, he said:

"Probably no public servant known to Russian history has ever been so severely and unanimously blamed in his own country as myself, and this not only for acts which I did, but for others which I never even dreamed of doing, and not merely for words and motives which were truly mine, but also for their opposites which were gratuitously attributed to me. Again, every public man known to history, no matter what the color of his politics, has had a party following, numerous or small. Some section of society endorsed his principles, some fraction assisted his efforts, many rejoiced at his achievements. I am the sole exception. Every party, extreme or moderate, agrees in objecting to what it terms my policy, on grounds that contradict each other diametrically.

"As a Russian patriot my heart bleeds at a lack of industrious fellow laborers in the country's cause, of earnest workers who do not expect political or social regeneration from radical programmes and speeches but from steady, wise, patient labor, from respect for the law, from reverence for duty, and from the exercise of self-control. With a fair contingent of such modest, conscientious toilers, Russia would soon rise to a very high place among the nations of the earth. I am hopeful that men of this sort will yet come forward. Meanwhile my motive in continuing to occupy a post which brings down such harsh judgment upon me is duty to the czar and the fatherland; my guiding principle is to act according to my lights, and my sole recompense is the approval of my conscience.

"On my return from the United States after the treaty of Portsmouth, all that I craved for was rest for body and mind in the seclusion of private life, and it was all the more likely that my wish would be granted since there were doubtless others who, placed in the position I now occupy, might have acquitted themselves of the task as well as myself, or better.

"Whatever the drawbacks or penalties attached to the performance of my duty, I cheerfully accept them. But I regret that no include among such the constant disapproval of those who do by certain political means, in the contrary, clever men's are always welcome, because it is me and helpful, while to the of the remainder one can see one's second ear. Some name their servants not only by have accomplished, but also may would fain have accompanied me ready to accept responsibility what I have really said and what I deprecate are the utterances graciously attributed to me every day."

Asia Still Aggressive.
The stealthy and tireless. Even armies were being defeated in Asia and its throne was shaken by was secretly fastening a firm grip on the northern part of the world. It was revealed by a publication in a Russian newspaper. Russia's purpose and the satiating of its old ambition cannot be determined. It is the powers interested in China's territorial integrity directly affected.—Cleveland

UNLIKE OTHER SPANIARDS.

Galicians from More Closely Allied to the Portuguese Than Their Own Race.

"For you must know that Galicia is so poor and mean a country, that there's no place for bragging." That was the comment of a visitor in 1892 to the country in northwestern Spain, from which the isthmian canal commission is making an effort to secure laborers for the Panama canal, according to the New York Tribune. Some one has said recently of Galicia that "it possesses one-third of the harbors of Spain and little commerce for them, the most hardy race of people in Spain and the poorest, the remains of one of the apostles and the worst government in the peninsula." Things have not changed greatly among the cratty, but not clever Gallegos in the last two centuries.

It has been argued that the Gallegos would make especially good workmen for employment in the canal zone, because they are Spaniards. Spaniards, or persons of Spanish ancestry, have been distributed through the tropical regions of the American continent and have thrived. While living in the Iberian peninsula, the Gallegos seem more closely allied to the Portuguese than the Spaniards, racially. They are not Spanish in tongue, habits or manners. Apparently, however, they are well adapted to physical labor on the canal, for, besides being strong and able to work hard and long under a hot sun, they are accustomed to going away from home to perform manual work.

In the harvest season one traveling in the Spanish stage coach often passes Gallegos trudging along seeking employment in the harvest field. Being passionately fond of the damp, hilly country of Galicia, however, they gladly turn back again when the work is over. Only their poverty could drive them forth. Some have ventured to South America. In Oporto they have been employed so generally as butlers and general manservants that the manservant is simply spoken of as the "gallego."

As for their poverty, there is a saying in Spain that "the Gallegos in Galicia, when they celebrate a wedding, feast on bread crusts." They are charged with being beggars, grumblers, lazy, stingy, contented with a crust of corn bread and no clothes to their backs, and with never eating meat or drinking a glass of wine. If the Gallego were only as clever as he is cratty he would be well to do instead of a "hewer of wood and a drawer of water." Lacking in cleverness, he is an artful dodger. It is said that even the gypsies do not venture to pass through the country of the Gallegos, lest they should be cheated by them, for they are more tricky and crafty than all the gypsies put together. There is no faith to be put in the Gallegan word, and as for contracts, they be writ in water and bind with the strength of a rope of sand.

OWN HERO OF A MOTHER.

Only a Schoolboy, But Greater in Her Eyes Than a King.

"The only fancy-work I've done for years has been sweaters and canvas knickerbockers and school flags," began a blue-eyed little matron known to the Washington Post. "That means, of course, that my oldest boy has been devoted to athletics since he was knee-high.

"I've tried to take an intelligent interest in sports, particularly football, which is his specialty; but I've agonized secretly over his sprains and bruises, and I've lain awake nights wondering how long it would be before he would be brought home with his back broken or an eye gone. Not for worlds would I have had him know it, but I've always rejoiced, almost prayerfully, when the football season was over.

"Last fall my boy's eleven played the team of another school. He came home a battered wreck, and I put him to bed without asking him how the game came out. He was a mass of bruises, and too tired to talk.

"He had hardly dropped asleep when I heard the school yell, loud enough to rattle the chandeliers. I went to the window and looked out. The street was full of boys, and they were all cheering like mad, and calling for my boy."

"He got into some clothes and stepped out on the porch, and the crowd simply went wild. He had to make a speech, and I discovered that in some way I don't understand at all he'd been responsible for the victory of the team.

"Talk about the mother of a president feeling proud of her son! Why, Mme. Bonaparte at her son's coronation wasn't a circumstance to me. I was the mother of a hero, and if I live to see him a famous man, as the world counts greatness, I shall never feel bigger. I just stood there behind my boy and bobbed up and down in delight. It was the proudest moment of all my life, and I wouldn't have changed places with any woman in all the history of the world."

Automobile Novelties.

Runabouts of American manufacture, costing from $400 to $11,500 each, are described in Technical World Magazine for April. Among other novelties are great auto-trucks capable of carrying a load of eight tons, tiny, three-wheeled, rapid-speed, delivery carts, electric horns, organ horns on which a tune can be played, electric annunciators for giving directions to the chauffeur and a number of important changes in the construction of motors.

WELL-BORN PAUPERS.

LAST OF MANY ENGLISH HOUSES IN POOR CIRCUMSTANCES.

But Few of the Present Peers Can Trace Their Descent from the Nobles of the Days of Chivalry.

It is a fact well known to all students of family history, said a genealogical expert to a writer for London Tit-Bits, that, if you want to find the "bluest blood" and the longest pedigree, you must go, not to the peerage, but to the great middle classes, and even lower, and that many a proud wearer of a duke's or an earl's coronet to-day has a pedigree which will not compare for distinction with that of some of his tradesmen or tenants. Yes, I know this is a surprising statement, but it is a sober statement of the truth.

There are very few of our present peers who can trace their descent from the great nobles of the days of chivalry or earlier. The founder of one fine of marquesses was an innkeeper; of a line of earls a grazier, and so on; and many of the greatest aristocrats of our time owe their rank and wealth to the enterprise and luck of city apprentices. To quote Burke:

"Let us look back only as far as the year 1637, and we shall find the great-grandson of Margaret Plantagenet, herself the daughter and heiress of George, Duke of Clarence, following the cobbler's craft at Newport, a little town in Shropshire. Nor is this the only branch from the tree of royalty that has dwindled and withered.

"If we were closely to investigate the fortunes of the many inheritors of the royal arms, it would soon be shown that 'the aspirin blood of Lancaster' flows through very humble veins. Among the lineal descendants of Edward of Woodstock, earl of Kent, sixth son of Edward I., king of England, entitled to quarter the royal arms, occur a butcher and a toll gatherer—the first a Mr. Joseph Smart of Halesowen, the latter a Mr. George Wilmot, keeper of the turnpike gate at Cooper's Bank, near Dudley.

"Then again, among the descendants of Thomas Plantagenet, duke of Gloucester, fifth son of Edward III., we discover Mr. Stephen James Penny, the late sexton at St. George's, Hanover square—a strange descent from the sword and scepter to the spade and pickaxe!"

The last head of the great Scottish house of Lindsay, and de Jure earl of Crawford, died in 1744 in the capacity of ostler in an inn at Kirkwall in the Orkneys; and in four generations the descendants of Sir Richard Knighley of Fawley (the head of one of the oldest and most distinguished families in England) and his wife, daughter of the great protector Somerset, ended as obscure London tradesmen—drapers and oil men outside the city gates.

Sir Thomas Conyers, the head of a family which had held vast estates, owned castles and enjoyed high rank in the north of England almost from the days of the conquest, died a pauper in a Durham workhouse. A grandson of Oliver Cromwell and a kinsman of Thomas Cromwell, earl of Essex, served behind the counter in a Snow Hill shop, while one of his nieces ended her days in a workhouse, and of his great-nieces one married a butcher's son and the other a Cambridgeshire shoemaker.

Among peasants and laborers, farmers and small tradesmen are many descendants of the great feudal houses of Scrope and Greystoke, Neville and D'Arey, and many another noble stock who can claim kinship with our bluest blooded peers and royal descents galore, while in the pedigree of the duke of Northumberland figure farmers and haberdashers, husbandmen and paper-stainers.

Chinese Humility.
A Chinaman, wearing his finest gown of silk, called at a house where he happened to disturb a rat, which was regaling itself out of a jar of oil standing on a beam over the door. In its sudden flight the rat upset the oil over the luckless visitor, ruining his fine raiment. While the man was still pale with rage his host appeared, and after the customary greetings the visitor accounted for his appearance in this wise: "As I was entering your honorable dwelling I frightened your honorable rat; while it was trying to escape it upset your honorable jar of oil over my poor and insignificant clothing. This explains the contemptible condition in which I find myself in your honorable presence."

Denmark's Dead Kings.
The early kings of Denmark are pillars of the church in an unusual sense. They were entombed in the Cathedral of Roskilde, which may be called the Danish Westminster Abbey, where the late King Christian was buried last month. The roof is supported by large masonry pillars, and nearly every column is the tomb of a king. The dead monarchs were walled up in them in a standing posture, and they may figuratively be said to have been holding up the church itself for centuries.—Youth's Companion.

Germans Staying at Home.
During the eighties of the last century Germany sent as many as 200,000 emigrants to the United States in a single year. That is ten times as many as she is sending to-day. The healthy development of German industries at home turned the tide of emigration from America to the cities, and the marvelous growth of such places as Berlin, Chemnitz, Nuremberg and others, has been the result.

THEORY OF THE ZETETICS.

Exponents of the Belief That the Earth Is Flat and the Sun Close By.

Astronomical science as accepted by credulous and confiding persons will be completely demolished if the dissidents who call themselves zetetics have their way, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The exponents of the theory of a flat earth are sufficiently numerous to establish a cult and adopt a distinctive designation. This is derived from "zeto," to search out, to investigate. Among the things they have searched out is a convincing and overwhelming mass of evidence demonstrating beyond cavil that the sun when directly overhead is only a few hundred miles distant, instead of 93,000,000 miles, as absurdly imagined by less deeply informed investigators.

The zetetics have persuaded themselves that the sun is about 30 miles in diameter, and is in every respect a very inconsequential affair, not worth bothering about. That "the sun do move" around the earth is one of the fundamental tenets of the zetetic doctrine. In its daily circuit above the flat and stationary earth, says one of the text books of the British branch of the society, the sun travels about 25,000 miles at the equator. Fun is poked at the Newtonian theory of gravitation and the curved shadow of the earth on the moon, as witnessed during an eclipse, is scouted as that the earth is round.

Lady Blount, one of the foremost English zetetics, has fashioned a pamphlet which easily annihilates this "so-called" demonstration of the earth's rotundity. With her the shadow of the earth upon the moon is a pure illusion. This proof "is on its last legs." She predicts that before long it will be generally admitted that the periodical lunar eclipse is no evidence whatever of the earth's globularity, as now asserted in books for the instruction of the young. The revision of the school books will not be accomplished immediately, but Lady Blount is encouraged to find that some of the opponents of the zetetics are beginning to realize that it is not the shadow of the earth which causes a lunar eclipse, for the reason that the sun and moon have been seen above the horizon when a lunar eclipse occurred.

The British zetetics are zealous missionaries. Thirteen literary productions have recently been published, upsetting every explanation of the universe advanced by the hare-brained astronomers.

DANISH KING A WRITER.

Political Articles from His Pen Were Published When He Was Crown Prince.

Frederick VIII., the new king of Denmark, the eldest brother of Queen Alexandra of England, and the uncle and father-in-law of her daughter, the new queen of Norway, of all the crowned heads of Europe is probably the only one who ever turned journalist for the time being even. In some of the European countries this fact might have called for criticism or comment, but Denmark, in spite of the fact that all of the members of the royal family have intermarried with other families of Europe until the late king was regarded not only as the doyen, but the grandfather of European royalty, is nothing if not democratic. The members of the royal houses of England and Russia, even the king of England and the czar, have enjoyed nothing so much in their lives as that when visiting Copenhagen they have been allowed to walk along the streets like other citizens. Their presence attracts little or no attention, and they are never stared at by the crowds as in some countries.

The members of the royal family of Denmark mingle freely with all classes and nothing is thought of it. They even amuse themselves with various occupations, and it is regarded as not being out of the way. The new king has but seldom identified himself with politics, though few would hold it up against him if he did, provided he simply went about the matter like any one else, and did not attempt to call to his support the influence of the throne. The occasion when he turned journalist was years ago when still crown prince. The left party came into power for the first time, and replaced the old conservative government belonging to the right. The leading official journal of Copenhagen contained some long political articles of which the crown prince was the author. The articles were not signed, but the fact of the crown prince having written them was reported in the other papers, and was never denied. The fact that the crown prince wrote the articles scarcely called for surprise, every one regarding it merely as a matter of course. The authorship might not have been called into question at all if it had not happened that the articles were particularly well written.

Glass More Costly Than Gold.
The value of glass may far exceed that of gold when made up into microscopic objectives. The front lens of a microscope (costing about $1) does not weigh more than about .0017 gramme (which weight of gold is worth about $1), and so the value of a kilogram of such lenses would be about $280,000. The cost of the raw material for making this weight of glass is from 24 to 40, and thus, when worked up into the shape of a lens, the glass has been increased in value about 50,000,000 times. Such disparity between the cost of the raw material and the manufactured article is probably a record in industrial technique.

SHIPS LOST IN THE ARTIC.

Explorers Deprived of Their Shelter and Provisions by Parting of Glacier.

December was a dark month. There was no difference between day and night. We missed the cheery illumination of the electric arc, and under the light of numerous little oil lamps we labored, sewing our fur clothing for the sledge trip and making harness, writes Anthony Flatau in McClure's. In the carpenter shop, improvised from part of our storehouse, Quartermaster Killiet, who had the assembling of the sledges in charge, toiled with the members of the crew Christmas and New Year passed happily. We celebrated the anniversary with banquets, to which our hard-working steward contributed many delicacies. A Christmas edition of "The Arctic Eagle," our camp newspaper, was printed. Assistant Commissary Stewart making up the forms and running the press, and Seaman Moutross, who had once been a printer, acting as compositor. Nearly all the members of the party contributed and considerable amusement was the result.

Storms were many, and the members of the scientific staff in their walks to and from the observatories often had to face winds of high velocity, with driving snow and low temperatures. At the Magnetic observatory it was generally necessary for an observer to carry a shovel and dig his way into the hut so as to free the man he relieved on watch. January was a wild month, noted for its variable and high temperatures. The maximum thermometer registered 31 degrees above zero on the 21st, during a storm in which the wind reached hurricane velocity. The storm continued until the morning of the 23d, when we found that the bay ice had been broken up and that much of it had disappeared. In the dim glow of noontime, for the sun was on its return to us, we discovered that the glacier had "calved" for miles along its face. Several of the parties explored the bay by jumping from cake to cake of ice, but no sign of the ship or the provision cache could be found, not even a case, barrel or spar. The America had gone to her doom in the night.

CRUSADE AGAINST ABSINTHE.

Press of Switzerland Up in Arms Against the Curse of the Nation.

Absinthe drinking is the curse of French Switzerland, and crimes by absinthe drunkards have been so alarmingly frequent of late that the Swiss press has started a crusade against the sale of the liquor. In the cantons of Vaud and Geneva over 100,000 signatures have been obtained to a petition urging the government to suppress the absinthe distilleries. During the last few months a series of murders and attempts at murder have been traced to persons who are confirmed absinthe drinkers, and who committed the crimes while under the influence of the liquor.

Most of the absinthe sold in small cafes at a penny a large wineglassful is made from chemicals and raw alcohol, and this is the stuff drunk by the poor, for the reason that it is cheaper than wine or beer. Good absinthe is of the same price as good whisky, but little of this is found in this country, as the greater part is exported to France and Belgium.

The canton of Neuchatel depends upon its revenue on the make and sale of absinthe, and from this quarter there is much opposition to the crusade. Not only the men, but the women and, to a less extent, girls and boys have developed the habit of absinthe drinking, which threatens to sap the manhood of the Swiss and the French cantons. There is every likelihood that in a short time the matter will come up for the consideration of the French authorities.

Portents of Disaster.

Norwegians are much concerned over a strange incident of the festivities which welcomed King Haakon to Christiania. A newspaper thus describes it: "At the very time when the royal procession had to pass the ancient fortress of Akerhus there was assembled there a great number of spectators, mostly military, in order to see the new king drive past. While the spectators were waiting to see the king in great excitement a jingling sound was heard and suddenly the crowned statue of King Oscar fell to the ground. At the same moment the crown fell off and was crushed in the fall. For a moment every one present felt a little uncomfortable on witnessing the incident, but it was immediately forgotten in watching the royal procession. A few days later some members of the same company were assembled in another part of the town in the house of one of the leaders of the government. The conversation turned on the strange incident of the statue. In the midst of the conversation a scraping sound was heard and the portrait of King Oscar glided down from the wall and fell to the ground."

BAR THE GATES

The following is a most significant dispatch recently sent out from Washington:

"According to official information received in this city, Italian anarchists are arriving in the United States in great numbers at both Pacific and Atlantic seaports. The diplomatic representatives of the Italian government have brought the matter to the attention of the United States. Through these representatives at San Francisco and Baltimore the immigration officials have been advised of the recent landing of a number of anarchists from Italy. Baltimore, it is said, is rapidly becoming an anarchistic center. The Italian consuls are engaged with a view to finding these men, and it is said that very shortly there will be placed in the hands of the immigration authorities sufficient data upon which to make many arrests."

No more powerful text for a sermon on the restriction of immigration could be found than that embodied in the foregoing despatch. In a few lines of type, a warning is sounded which the American people will do well to heed.

This country has received in the past five years probably millions of emigrants of the most undesirable class. Not all of these immigrants were Italians by any means. Many of them were Russians, bringing to America the nihilistic ideas born of oppression in their own country. Many others were Poles, intoxicated by American freedom of speech and thought and as likely to make good citizens as a cabin boy to make an efficient captain of an ocean liner. Still others were Hungarians and men and women from other countries of southeastern Europe, none of them the sort of people likely to benefit the United States by their presence.

These strictures do not apply to all Italians, all Poles, all Russians or all Hungarians. It is, nevertheless, to be doubted, if among any of these people, the Italians excepted, the proportion of desirable newcomers has ever been greater than one in twenty. Although Italy does send us anarchists there have also come from her shores men who have made good Americans.

It should not be forgotten that under the strictest immigration laws aliens of the class we really want would not be barred out. It may be that if the United States were more exacting in its demands, more of the industrious and ambitious among the European peoples would seek homes in this land of the free.

It is folly to say that only the man whose mind is set upon better things than he has known will come to America in search of them. In these days of assisted and sometimes forced emigration what might have been true once no longer applies.

It is not unreasonable to fear the denationalization of the United States unless the hordes of European who are now pouring into the country are ruthlessly checked. The danger is actual and demands measures that under other circumstances might be called harsh. Congress cannot much longer delay if any real good is to be accomplished. Close the gates and double bar them.

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS

To be tabored in modern society a man must be a villain indeed; and that, too, in a unique and almost unheard-of way.

The hare that lays the Easter eggs. Oh, tell us quick, where is he? The price is soaring up so high He should be getting busy!

There is a Russian cabinet tangle. Too many wires, perhaps.

Those Easter eggs with varnish on them must have been laid by a Welsh rabbit.

Elocution seems to be epidemic among the writers and the prize fighters of today.

Of course the lilies—floral and feminine—are just bound to be in full bloom Sunday!

The old question of the pressure of society on the individual never appears to worry the modern American.

The old saying of "Who breaks pays" should be amended by the addition of the modifying phrase "if caught."

Before Easter arrives, there is yet time to discuss the question of whether the hares or the conies or the Welsh rabbits lay the Easter eggs.

Vesuvius is demonstrating that it is the real thing in the volcano line. We hope its latest outburst will not result in an increase of immigration to the United States from that district.

We are led to wonder if the statement in a statement in a contemporary that Congressman Littlefield of Maine ranks with McCall of Massachusetts is intended as a compliment or a calldown; if so, for which? It is indeed a puzzler.

In 1869 we find the London Review saying that "the mildest cigarettes have never been adopted by the women in our country, and we hope they never will," yet only a few days ago an English railroad startled the world by putting on a smoking car "for women only."

PART OF WALLS MAY BE SAVED

The work of removing the walls of Masonic Temple, Dover, is progressing rapidly. Up to the third story, they are apparently in good condition and an expert will be asked to decide if the old walls can be used for a new building. If they can, the work of construction will begin at once.

WHY?

Will some member of the city council please inform us why the sale of the road roller and street scraper is proposed? The scraper can be used on the outskirts of the city to advantage and the roller will certainly be necessary if macadam roads are to be built in Portsmouth.

ORCHESTRA WILL ASSIST CHOIR

On Easter Sunday, the choir of the Unitarian Church will be assisted by an orchestra composed of William J. Kershaw, cello, John H. Parlin, cornet, Joseph Hodgdon, clarinet, F. A. Robbins, double bass, and Chauncey B. Hoyt, violin.

OUR EXCHANGES

About Abbie

By Carolyn Wells
 Abbie Ben Adams, may her life be spared.
 Awoke one night, and felt a trifle scared:
 For on her shirtwaist-box, cross-legged, safe,
 A vision writing on a little slate.
 Exceeding nervousness made Abbie quake:
 And to the vision timidly she spoke:
 "What writest thou?" The vision looked appalled
 At her presumption, and quite coldly drawled:
 "The list of Our Best People who depart
 For watering places sumptuous and smart."
 "And am I in it?" asked Miss Abbie.
 "No!"

The scornful vision said. "You're poor, you know."
 "I know," said Abbie; "I go where it's cheap.
 I can't afford mountains or prices steep.
 But, ere you leave, just jot this item down.
 I never leave my cats to starve in town."
 The vision wrote, and vanished. Next night, late,
 He came again and brought his little slate,
 And showed the names of people really best.
 And lo! Miss Abbie's name led all the rest!

—Life.

Minnie's Journey

The following incident is vouched for as being true by the owner of the cat:

Mrs. L. owned two cats, one of which was a female who was most peculiar, both in her markings and also in color. Mrs. L.'s sister was very anxious to possess her, but her sister said: "Minnie will never stay with you, I know." When Minnie had her next family, two kittens were saved. Mrs. L. took Minnie and her two babies in a basket to her sister's house at Orchard Park. She went there in a buggy as it was eight miles away. The babies were then three weeks old. One morning two weeks afterwards when Mrs. L. opened her back door she found Minnie outside with both the kittens! Minnie was very thin and evidently tired out, but after eating some bread and milk she went to sleep with her babies behind the stove. Later in the day the milkman came. The milkman lived beyond Orchard Park and came through that place daily. Mrs. L. requested him to inform her sister of the cat's return and to express her wonder as to how she came.

The milkman looked at the cat and kittens and said: "I saw that poor cat a week ago just this side of Orchard Park, but of course I had no idea that she was your cat or I should have brought her that morning. Well, I saw that cat carrying a kitten along the road where there were no houses, so I stopped to watch her. She dropped that kitten when she had carried it about fifty feet and then she turned back and came along with a second kitten. When she got up to the first kitten she laid down the other one and again took up the first one and carried it on another fifty feet or so. I didn't interfere with them as I thought the mother cat knew her own business and was managing it finely, but the poor thing! She is here safe anyhow, but what a wonderful cat!"—Cat Journal, Rochester, N. Y.

Advice No Joke in New Hampshire

 Rube Meddlers—It was so. It just said "Don't leave the farm."—Philadelphia Press.

Let The Youngsters Go It

The decision of the high school principals to let the boys go on playing football is a rational one, providing the game be subjected to proper regulations. Its propriety, however, would not have been so certain had it not been for the action of the colleges, which are pretty generally decreeing that their teams shall no longer play with high school teams, and also that freshmen shall not be permitted to play on university teams or in intercollegiate contests. Such action by the colleges will enforce reform of some of the gravest abuses of high school athletics.—Bangor Commercial.

THE THEATRICAL FOLK

An Augustus Thomas Comedy
 The action of "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," the Augustus Thomas comedy which comes to Music Hall on Tuesday evening, April 17, altogether takes place in one day and is shown in three acts under the same roof. The incidents, from the moment that her ladyship's bootlets are found on the first escape of a Bar Harbor hotel, outside the window occupied by a good-looking young bachelor of whom her husband is already slightly jealous—until the final curtain, are described in a succession of ludicrous entanglements, that are, of course, straightened out in the end to the restored happiness of everybody. New

Scene in "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots"

York theatregoers laughed heartily over this comedy at The Lyceum last winter, and it opened the present season at the same theatre in that city, to a repetition of crowded houses.

Sousa's Entire Band Coming

The question is often asked in smaller cities if John Philip Sousa really brings with him his whole band, or whether he cuts it in two after leaving New York city and serves only half a meal.

Replying to these questions let it be known that Mr. Sousa comes to this city on Monday evening, April 23, with the identical organization and the same soloists that are heard in his concerts in New York, Boston, Washington, Baltimore, Chicago, and other large cities of the country. No matter what city he visits, be it large or small, he serves it with the same conscientiousness of a true artist. His programs differ not one whit from those offered a metropolitan audience, nor is he backward in responding to encores as generously as he does in New York. It has been a rule of his artistic career never to slight any audience, no matter what its size. His programs, therefore, are never cut nor his enthusiasm dampened.

Andrew Mack at Boston Theatre

With "The Way to Kenmare," his latest comedy success, as a vehicle for the display of his histrionic and melodic powers, Andrew Mack, the distinguished and ever popular young Irish comedian, is announced by Manager Lawrence McCarthy as the attraction at the Boston Theatre for the fortnight beginning next Monday evening and including, in addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees, a special afternoon performance on April 19, Patriot's day.

Replete with scenes from Irish and American life, full of humorous situations and characterization, and bountifully supplied with sentiment and comedy, this beautiful drama affords a fine opportunity for the sweet-voiced comedian to be seen and heard at his very best. "The Way to Kenmare" is indeed a typical Andrew Mack production. No one need be told that as the hero of this romantic Irish play Andrew Mack has a thoroughly congenial and captivating role. Neither is it necessary to remark that he is the most pleasing and popular of Irish comedians, or that he sings and acts in a way to please his audience. Mr. Mack will be heard in a number of new songs.

THE BIRTHDAY BOOK

Joseph H. Berry, one of Portsmouth's oldest residents, today will quietly observe his ninety-fifth natal day, and in good preservation considering that he lacks but five years of being a centenarian.

Lafayette V. Newell, the ever genial and alert resident, reaches his seventy-third birthday today and will as usual observe it at his popular photographic studio by practicing his art.

NEW SECRETARY CHOSEN

At the regular meeting of the local Grange on Thursday evening, Lizzie Carrier was elected secretary in the place of W. W. Dunbar, resigned.

THE MESSAGE OF THE EASTER BELLS

Sweet the bells on Easter pealing,
 On the air their gladness song
 Sweet the message softly stealing.
 Of the triumph over wrong;
 For since Christ the Lord has risen,
 Sin no more on earth holds sway,
 Burst death's gloom and awful prison
 On Christ's Resurrection day.

How the glory of that dawning
 Bells, renewed now tell today,
 How the glory of that morning
 Shines adown the years away!
 Christ arose! "The first fruits" glorious
 Of those gone from you and me
 Christ arose! but all victorious
 Will their resurrection be.

Softer grow the bells revealing
 How the grave ourselves shall claim;
 Louder their triumphant pealing
 Of new life through Jesus' name.
 Gladder now the bells are swelling,
 Hope renewing everywhere,
 Of a glad reunion telling
 That all, with the Lord, shall share.

PEOPLE WIN

In Famous and Long Fought Percy Summer Club Case

Concord, April 12.—A decision in an important question, which has been in litigation for the last twenty years, was handed down on Thursday by Judge Putnam of the United States circuit court of appeals. It was the famous Percy Summer Club case, in which the club sought to prevent the public from fishing in a lake on the club's grounds, in the northern part of the state, and which involved the rights of the public to fish in the ponds of the state having an area of ten acres or more.

The case was taken up by the state and was prosecuted by Attorney General Eastman. Judge Putnam's decision is for the defendant and upholds the right of the people in the public waters of the state. The bill is dismissed and costs assessed the defense.

QUIET IN WASHINGTON

Very Little Doing in National Capital

SENATOR BURNHAM HAS ONE BILL BEFORE SENATE

(By BAYARD C. RYDER)

Washington, April 11.—Spring is fast putting on her "glad rags" here; the grass is as green as it will be in June, the forsythias, tulips, pansies, hyacinths and dandelions are blooming and rose bushes and other shrubbery are fast leaving out. The organ grinder and the cry of the Potomac shad vender are heard in nearly every street, heralding the glad Spring time. The gray squirrels in the parks are getting busy and the sparrows make more noise than all else. Excursionists are flocking to the city and groups of interested visitors are seen on every hand. Amid all these scenes, Congress continues to grind out laws good, bad and indifferent.

Nothing Doing For New Hampshire

The New Hampshire delegation have nothing on either the Senate or House calendars at the present time of special local interest, outside of the pension bills and two or three private claims. Senator Burnham as a sub committee of the committee of territories has a bill to incorporate the Alaskan Railroad Company, that is of much interest to everybody interested in the District of Alaska, as it means a great deal to those people. The bill is one of the first introduced at this session of Congress and the senator has put much hard work into investigations, holding hearings, etc. The bill provides for the construction of railroad and telegraph and telephone lines from the Gulf of Alaska to the Yukon River at or near Eagle, through American territory. Favorable mention of this proposed road was made in President Roosevelt's last annual message, in which he recommended that the government render aid to the promoters in its construction. The bill is now before the Senate and will be brought up for consideration at the first favorable opportunity after Senator Burnham returns from New Hampshire.

Senator Bailey Talks

Senator Bailey of Texas made a three hour speech on railroad rate regulation Tuesday afternoon, in answer to the speeches of Senators Knox and Spooner. Senator Bailey displayed a thorough legal knowledge of the subject and it is thought that his argument won quite a number of Republicans to his way of thinking.

Postmastership Nominations

The nominations of Ellsworth F. Pike to be postmaster at Franklin, John T. Welch to be postmaster at Dover, Frank Williams to be postmaster at Enfield and Horace French to be postmaster at West Lebanon have recently been confirmed by the Senate.

Visitors From New Hampshire

Among the recent arrivals from New Hampshire, I recall the names of Hon. and Mrs. D. A. Taggart, Dr. and Mrs. L. M. French, Col. and Mrs. E. W. Harrington of Manchester, Hon. and Mrs. Rufus H. Graves of Newfields, J. K. Whipple, Bertha K. Whipple, Fitzwilliam; J. Frank Seavey, Miss L. A. Webster, Dover; Mrs. J. F. Draper and Miss Draper, Plymouth.

"PAUL JONES NIGHT"

Cornet solo, Mrs. Fanny Mudgett
Vocal solo, Ernest Bilbruck
Address, Rev. George W. Gile
Drum solo, Walter Marden
Address, Guy E. Corey
Singing, "America," with cannonade accompaniment.

Master Marden, the drummer, will appear in a Continental uniform loaned by a club member and worn at the Return of the Sons of Portsmouth in 1853, in the company of Continental soldiers, in command of Capt. Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

The Paul Jones Club and members of the Helen Seavey Quilting Party will attend the exercises as invited guests, also representatives of the press and members of Ranger Section of the Navy League and ladies.

The vacancy at the Fernald School has been filled by Miss Emma Freeman of Portsmouth, who relieved Miss Cole on account of the latter's ill health.

A regular meeting of Rebekah Lodge, No. 3, will be held on Saturday evening at Grange Hall.

In the Atlantic Monthly Magazine for April, Lucy Scarborough Conant, in an article entitled "Tide Rivers", speaks admiringly and at some length of the Piscataqua River. Miss Conant, who is a native of Boston, has passed many Summers at the hotels in this town.

Miss Bessie Whitehouse of Worcester, Mass., is visiting at the house of her grandmother, Mrs. Lucinda Seawards on Government street.

Mrs. Nellie Card Hea of Boston is the guest of Mrs. George Frost.

Kittery Point

A relic of the palmy days of the port of Kittery, an ancient wharf which has stood for seventy years on Moore's Island, collapsed on Thursday. Many old residents can remember when little fishermen and coasters, all with "Kittery" on their sterns, lay by the dozen at this old wharf and others nearby, which have long since died natural deaths.

Daniel Frisbee, who has been ill for some time at his home at Hutchins Corner, is reported as not so well.

Ernest C. Tobey today moved his family into the new tenement of Jesse E. Frisbee.

Augustus Tobey, who has been confined to his home by illness all Winter, has resumed work at Randall's fish market.

Storer G. Decatur is passing a vacation from his school duties at Concord, Mass., with his parents here.

William Dean Howells, accompanied by his son, John Meade Howells, will arrive here on April 28 for a short visit. The family will settle here for the Summer soon after that date.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Favour are passing a few days in Boston.

M. A. Perkins, one of the owners of the wrecked schooner Marion Draper, left here on Thursday for New Bedford, where another of the firm's vessels is in trouble. No agreement has yet been made as to the disposition of the Draper, but Mr. Perkins will return tonight and doubtless a settlement will be reached.

Miss Helene Seaward is confined to her home by a slight illness.

Capt. Henry Marden put his fine new gasoline boat in commission for the season on Thursday.

AVENGERS OF THE OPPRESSED

By OWEN OLIVER

(Copyright, 1905, by Owen Oliver)

I was sitting when I arrived at "The house." My father's wife (he had been dead two years) looked stealthily behind her back and before she came to meet me.

"What is it, Lucy?" I inquired anxiously. Her letter had been almost unobtrusive.

"The past has risen up against me," she said in a slow, unsteady voice. "It was when we lived in Italy four years ago." Her mother was Italian. "I was only 18, Dick, and I joined a secret society. They called themselves 'Avengers of the Oppressed.' They kill people—I thought it was all talk and would not believe him when he warned me against them."

"He? Who?" She twisted her handkerchief and did not answer. "You'd better tell me, Lucy."

"He doesn't matter, really; but I will tell you—I loved him. That is all. Afterwards I found out that he loved me; but I thought then that he only looked upon me as a foolish, willful child. He was very masterful, and he used to try to dictate to me. So I joined them, because he told me not to. I feared that some day the lot to do something would fall on me. Then your father proposed to me. He was content with such affection as I could give him. I was fond of him, Dick, in a way. So I married him to get away from Italy and them."

"And from—the man?" I suggested.

"No, no! He went away before I was married. I have never seen him or heard from him since. I thought that the society had forgotten me till a month ago. Then I saw two Italians watching me, as I went into a shop. I found one of the men at my elbow. He whispered in my ear—'Oh, Dick! The first warning! Those who desert the society are given three warnings to return. If they go back they have to commit the next crime. If they do not go back—they die! I prefer to die.' She shivered."

"I came down here stealthily to try and escape them. The morning before yesterday I ventured out for a ride. I met the one who had spoken to me. He gave the second warning. After that they give three days—then they will kill me."

"Can you describe those men to me?" I asked.

"They are Italians; but they are very English in looks and dress. I do not know how to describe them."

"An English-looking Italian came down with me in the train this morning," I observed, thoughtfully. "Tall and dark; black mustache and no beard; about 35; very good-looking."

"It is the one who did not speak to me," she clutched my arm.

"He spoke to me freely enough. In fact, he seemed anxious to make my acquaintance. He gave his name as Antonelli."

"He would not give his real name. You did not tell him yours, or where you lived?"

"Yes, I did," I smiled. "I had seen him read my luggage labels. He asked about you too."

"Are you sure that you need run away?" I asked.

"He spoke to you about me? Why should he take any interest in me?"

"A man might. He merely said that he had seen you in Rome when you were a young girl, and he would like to meet you. He admires you. That's all. So far as Antonelli is concerned," I said, "I will back your looks against the society."

"You would not if you knew them."

"I may not know societies, but I know men. I don't believe for a moment that he belongs to it. My dear girl, it's all fancy. No one is spying on you."

"Some one comes at night," she persisted. "I have stood at the window in the dark, and seen something move. I know I am watched. I can feel it. The man who spoke to me in London was not fancy. I am sure, Dick."

"The fact is you're overwrought and hear what you expect hear. Your illusions will grow, if you ruin your health and nerves by shutting yourself up indoors. Come out with me to-morrow. If we meet Antonelli, I'll introduce him."

"And if I think he's dangerous?"

"Then we'll have a detective down to watch him, and slip off to London when he's out of the way. There's no place like London to hide in."

"I shall have to take another name," she observed. I smiled.

"I suspect that is the danger that Antonelli threatens," I told her.

"She toyed with some grapes for a few moments. Then she suddenly laughed, and jumped up and danced chauntically round the room. After a few turns she took a red rose from the table and put it in her white dress, and another in her hair."

"You think it is the love-lorn Antonelli that watches?" she asked.

"He, if anyone."

"Then he is in danger!"

"She ran suddenly to the window, drew back the thick curtains and stepped out on to the balcony. She laughed excitedly."

"I hope he is admiring—the poor, patient Antonelli!—if he is watching there. See! He doesn't hurt me."

"I don't think any man would like to hurt you, Lucy," I said, admiringly.

"I don't think so to-night. Since you have come I feel at peace with the world; the whole good, kind world, Dick."

There was a sharp flash from the trees at the end of the lawn. I caught her round the waist and pulled her below the balustrade. There was a report, and I heard the splutter of a bullet against the wall.

"The last warning!" she gasped. "Then the family!"

At two o'clock the next morning I slipped out of the back door. It was full moon and I added Sir Patrick by the moonlight. It was Lucy's saddle that I put on him, and I wore a long cloak and hat of hers over my own clothes.

I walked Sir Patrick till we emerged from the shadow of the house, then galloped down the avenue. As soon as I got into the road I detected the sound of a horse galloping in the little lane that runs parallel to the road, about 300 yards on the left. We usually left the house by the bridge path to the lane, and our watch had evidently waited there. I smiled grimly and set Sir Patrick fairly going.

Sometimes the moon was out, and the road lay before me like a great white snake. Now and then I caught a glimpse through a gap in the hedge of my unknown pursuer, and twice I thought he called to me. We came to the crossways and the wood.

I rode into a little open space, behind some tall bushes, and crouched low in the saddle. I could hear a horse's hoofs, when a dry twig cracked suddenly in the bushes just behind me. I gripped my rifle. I could distinguish a horseman over the hedge, when there was another crackle, and the rustle of a man moving among the bushes. I knew the sound! I turned quickly and faced a bright flash, a dozen yards away. Then some one sprang upon me from behind. I twisted round and grappled with him and we rolled over into the open space behind the bushes. My head struck violently against a tree stump, and I was half stunned. He pinned me to the ground, and another man raised a dagger in the air. The moonlight glinted on it. There was the report of a revolver shot, and the man with the dagger rolled over. The other sprang to his feet; but there was another report and he too fell.

I rose unsteadily and saw Antonelli peeping through the bushes, revolver in hand. The horse from which he had dismounted was panting in the lane below. Antonelli addressed me passionately in Italian. I did not understand what he said; but it was clear enough that he took me for Lucy and that he was in love with her.

"You are a brave man," he said. "I wanted to warn her against them. I called to you to stop, but you did not hear, and I feared. I have died a hundred times to-night, while I rode."

"You knew they were here?" I asked.

License Commissioners Listen To Evidence

AGAINST HOTEL DEWITT IN THIS CITY

The First Portsmouth Complaint In A Long Time

ILLEGAL SALES OF LIQUOR ON TWO SUNDAYS ALLEGED

(Special to The Herald)
Concord, April 13.—On Thursday, the board of license commissioners heard the first Portsmouth case that has claimed its attention in a long time. It was that of Mrs. Arabella Cotton, holder of the first class license of Hotel DeWitt in that city.
Mrs. Cotton was represented by her husband, Elisha T. Cotton, and by Attorney Samuel W. Emery, Jr., of Portsmouth. Special Agent G. Scott Locke conducted the case for the commission.

Two of the principal witnesses of the prosecution were missing. They were John Scanlon, formerly porter at the hotel, and Michael McGowan, the marine, who, it is alleged, bought whiskey at The DeWitt on Sunday, March 4.

A complaint made to City Marshal Entwistle of Portsmouth by Mrs. Grace Mabel Lasage, at one time employed at The DeWitt, led to the hearing. Sales of whiskey to McGowan at three different times on Sunday, March 4, and the illegal sale of two bottles of beer and four glasses of whiskey on Sunday, March 25, were alleged.

Mr. Locke said that he could not produce the witness who was expected to testify to the first charge. He could produce the sworn statement of that witness taken in the presence of Mr. Cotton, but not in that of the licensee. The statement was not, therefore, presented.

The first witness was Mrs. Lasage. She said that on Sunday, March 25, she was employed as a chambermaid at Hotel DeWitt. While at work on the second floor about nine o'clock in the morning, she saw Hazen S. Cotton come up stairs with "two bottles of what looked like beer." With him were two young men who went into the card room, where there were four chairs and a table.

About an hour afterward, Mrs. Lasage saw John Scanlon in the hallway. He had a tray on which were four glasses containing what she took to be whiskey. In four other glasses was a liquid having the appearance of water. Scanlon went into the writing room, where there were two men and two girls. She did not again see these people, but later saw Scanlon enter the reception room with four glasses of beer.

Mr. Locke said that he could show that Mr. Cotton had kept Scanlon out of town, but this was ruled out.

It was shown that Mrs. Lasage had had some trouble with Mr. Cotton. The testified that on one occasion while she was at work in a room his behavior had been such that she ordered him out. The day following, in the kitchen, she continued, he attacked her, but Mrs. Cotton separated them. He threw her some money, amounting to $1.50 and ordered her out of the house. She returned the money and demanded pay for a full week, as she had received no notice. At the employment agency of Mrs. Raleigh, a few days later, Mr. Cotton offered her $3.50 and asked her to leave town for a short time. The witness asserted that he told her that Scanlon had been sent away.

Cross examined by Attorney Emery, Mrs. Lasage said that she liked neither Mr. nor Mrs. Cotton. She stuck to her testimony and denied that she expected to receive any money. She made a complaint to get even, she said, but had not expected to appear before the commission.

Deafness made the taking of the testimony of Mrs. Lasage somewhat difficult.

Special Agent Locke said that there were but three names on the register of The DeWitt for March 25. Marshal Entwistle said that he had never received any complaint against Mrs. Lasage.

The witness was questioned by

Elisha T. Cotton testified that at the employment agency, Mrs. Raleigh had told him he had better give Mrs. Lasage $5.00 and have her leave town. He refused and later in the evening declined to answer a telephone call from Mrs. Raleigh. Cross-examined, he said that his wife was the owner and he the manager of the hotel. Sometimes he made purchases in her name and sometimes in that of the house. Mr. Cotton denied that he sent Scanlon away or that he knew his whereabouts. At first he said he had not heard from the man, but afterward admitted that Scanlon had called him on the telephone and inquired for one of the table girls.

Mr. Cotton denied running poker games and said that he never had a lay-out at his house. Asked if he had told Tom Flood that he had a lay-out, Mr. Cotton refused to answer.

Hazen S. Cotton, clerk at the hotel, said that he served one drink of whiskey to a guest on the day in question and carried two bottles of ginger ale to a room on the second floor. He held the license at one time, he said, but transferred it to his mother when he went to California. He knew nothing of Scanlon's whereabouts.

Messrs. Locke and Emery made arguments and the commissioners took the case under consideration.

A SECRET NO LONGER

Story Of Birth Of Louis R. Fuller Made Public

Portsmouth people are deeply interested in recent revelations, the result of the arrest for blackmail of Homer Hawkins, a timekeeper for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

The revelations concern Louis R. Fuller, Harvard, '04, who is soon to be married to a college day sweetheart, Miss Rowbotham, daughter of George B. Rowbotham of Dorchester, Mass.

It is shown that Fuller is the adopted son of Dr. Frank Fuller, an intimate friend of Mark Twain and thought to be very wealthy.

Dr. Fuller married his second wife, Miss Anna Thompson, in this city in the early seventies. She was the sister of the late Jacob Thompson, exchange editor of the New York Times who was murdered last Fall. A son, named Frank, was born, but died in infancy while his parents were on their way West. The child was brought to Portsmouth and buried.

About a year later, a boy three months old, was received into the Fuller family. His mother was a beautiful girl sixteen years old, of a respected and cultured family. The boy was born on March 5, 1878, and his real parentage was a secret to all but a select few until this week. The young man himself knew nothing of his birth.

He was told by the mother of Hawkins, Mrs. Alice Faxon, daughter of Dr. Fuller.

POLICE COURT

Charles Marotta, an Italian, was tried before Judge Simms in police court this (Friday) morning on the charge of selling spirituous liquors. He was held for the grand jury in the sum of $300.

On a charge of assault, Marotta was fined $2.00 and costs of $7.67. He appealed and was ordered to furnish bonds of $100.

The case of "Paddy" Driscoll, up for intoxication, was continued until ten o'clock tomorrow forenoon.

GOOD FRIDAY CHORAL SERVICE

There will be a choral service at the North Church this evening at half-past seven, when the Good Friday cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" will be sung by the chorus choir. The public is cordially invited to attend.

WILL HAVE LIGHTS

New Castle So Votes At Special Town Meeting

At the special New Castle town meeting on Thursday evening, it was voted to light the streets of the town. The sum of $515 was appropriated for that purpose. The actual vote was seventy-seven for and four against the action.

Authority was given the selectmen, Robert H. Harding, W. T. Meloon and Edwin P. Rand, to make a contract for one year. It will probably be given to the Welsbach Street Lighting Company of Boston.

A committee, composed of Oliver B. Marvin, Richard E. Poole, Conrad Push and Frank A. Brown, was appointed to assist the selectmen in locating the lights.

J. W. Pridham was moderator of the meeting and Town Clerk William Jenness was secretary.

AT THE NAVY YARD

The four masted schooners Governor Powers and Independence are chartered to bring coal to this yard for the yards and docks department. The Independent is due now and the Powers will arrive in about three weeks. The combined capacities of these two vessels amount to 4300 tons.

The only board sidewalk on the navy yard, that on Isaac Hull street, would now well bear replacing by another of brick or crushed stone. It has become a little too rough for safe navigation.

Arrivals of material for the several departments have been rather quiet for the past week.

The jagged condition of the bottom at Henderson's Point has pretty well demoralized the current on the ebb tide. Small boats are totally bewildered in the unaccountable eddies, whirlpools, etc., which have made their appearance since the big blast.

The little schooner Rising Sun, which was wrecked at Wells Beach on Tuesday, was regularly employed in carrying stone to this yard in 1902-1903, while the new dry dock was under construction.

The engagement of Miss Mattie Williams of Kittery to George A. Howell, wireless telegraph operator at this yard, is announced.

The tug Sioux, Capt. Olsen, which attended the very successful standardization trial of the new cruiser Washington off Rockland on Wednesday, should arrive here today.

An intoxicated marine, who fell into the clutches of Officer O. T. Philbrick on Tuesday evening, was fined $10 and costs of $6.90 by Judge Aaron B. Cole on Wednesday.

The lighter of the Massachusetts Contracting Company was moved back to Henderson's Point this (Friday) morning, having dumped its cargo of stone inside Pumpkin Island.

A PROTEST MADE

By Attorney John W. Kelley Of This City

BEFORE THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE

In Behalf Of Citizens Of Town Of New Castle

MR. KELLEY TELLS REPORTER OF TRIP TO WASHINGTON

Attorney John W. Kelley returned today (Friday) from Washington, where he appeared before the appropriation committee of the House of Representatives. He was seen by a representative of this paper and said:

"The article in the Boston Herald this morning, which began in this wise, 'The town of New Castle, N. H., through a lawyer and the two New Hampshire representatives, took a slap at the American soldier today', is entirely untrue in its essentials. I appeared before the House appropriation committee yesterday in the behalf of the town of New Castle and Mr. Niles, a permanent resident and citizen of New Castle, to protest against the war department taking another piece of land for barracks and other buildings at Fort Stark, New Castle, when it already had land, bought for this purpose four years ago, adjoining Fort Constitution."

"As a matter of fact there was no reporter present in the committee room during the hearing, so that his mis-information was supplied by someone who also was not there."

"About four years ago the war department purchased about five acres of land adjoining Fort Constitution on which to erect barracks and stables, a power plant, and other buildings, and paid $56,000 for it. The war department now has a request before Congress for $40,000 more to buy seven acres of land alongside Fort Stark, known as the Lawrence property, for the purpose of putting thereon barracks and other necessary buildings."

The purpose of my appearance before the appropriation committee was to protest in behalf of the town and Mr. Niles against there being two sets of barracks and other buildings in the town of New Castle within a mile and a half of each other, when it appears to all, with one exception, who have examined the situation, that one reservation will amply accommodate all the troops necessary to take care of the forts guarding this harbor."

"Two-thirds of the entire taxable valuation of New Castle is in this mile and a half strip and if the war department insists on taking land here and there in this strip for the sake of putting this or that building on it, it will, of course, depreciate the values."

"Nothing was said about soldiers being distasteful to the people of New Castle. Nothing was said at the hearing about Summer residents or Summer resorts. The American soldier is not an issue in this matter and never has been. The people of New Castle recognize the fact that there must be troops to guard the forts and to take care of the forts. All they ask is that a reasonable amount of common sense be used in making the selection of the necessary lands for this purpose, and the people in New Castle now say that there is no justice in the contention of the war department that the troops in New Castle are unsatisfactorily housed at present, when, as a matter of fact, they have had six acres of land for four years on which they could have built buildings to accommodate ten times the greatest number of troops that have ever been stationed there."

"It rather looks to me as if the person who inspired the Boston article saw so little justice in his cause that he wandered into the realm of fiction to create an issue which was never in the case."

"In closing, I desire to say, that neither Congressman Salloway nor Congressman Currier said a single word to the committee in favor of or against the proposition, so that the lugging of their names into this controversy in the way it was done and the making it appear that they made statements that reflected upon the American soldier is an outrage, and if the inspirer of such a falsehood is in the government, he ought to be summarily punished."

The people of New Castle are strongly opposed to the taking of further land in that town by the national government. At the annual town meeting last month a resolution of protest was passed by an almost unanimous vote.

A Civil War debt of $22,000 is still charged against the town, but there is a bill now before Congress providing for the paying of this debt to the state by the government.

Taking the Lawrence property from the taxable list would increase the tax rate, now $20 on $1000, at least five dollars. The total tax valuation of the town is $296,000 and the Hotel Wentworth property represents about one-third of this.

Edmund G. Niles purchased the Lawrence property when the government option expired last Summer and the war department plan is the condemnation of this property.

The foregoing is, in brief, a statement of the claims and arguments of New Castle people.
